

37th Transportation Group

Description: The Shoulder Sleeve Insignia is 2 inches wide by 3 inches high with elliptical edges on the top and bottom. The background is brick red with a 1/8" wide golden yellow border. The arrow is black in color with a dashed golden yellow line down the center. The semi-circle in the center of the patch is golden yellow with four rays emanating from it.

Symbolism: The brick red and gold colors are the colors of the Transportation Corps. The arrow symbolizes the Transportation Corps as the spearhead of logistics. The dashed line along the arrow represents the German Autobahn and the unit's long and storied history supporting operations throughout Europe. The dashes along the highway also vary in length and width and allude to the multi-faceted methods the Transportation Corps uses to support the warfighter. The road leads to a rising sun, representing movement before the battle begins and the Transportation Corps motto "Nothing Happens until Something Moves." The rising sun is a reference to the all knowing Greek god of the sun "Helios" and symbolizes the center of command from which all strength is derived. The four rays of the sun signify the Naples-Foggia, Rome-Arno, North Apennines, and Po Valley campaigns in which the unit participated. The three colors combined with the seven dashes represent the numbered designation of the unit – 37th.
